Not only to politicians, but to the public generally, the desperate illness of the senior Senator has been of intense interest. Inquiries as to his condition are constant; expressions of sympathy are heard on every hand, and newspaper offices are besieged with inquiries. What news from Florida?" is the question on every the Fiorida? is the question on every lip.

Possible complications have been largely in the minds of the members of the Legislature. It was quickly recognized that should the illness of Major Daniel result fatally, of which there seems to be practically no doubt, the Democratic primary of next year will decide two senatorships instead of one. The adjournment sine die in the morning by both bodies, was intended to end the legislative day, and, although one or more members differed as to the effect, it was understood that inasmuch as there was no possibility of getting the attendance of a sufficient number of members to allow of positive action, it would be best to put the whole matter in the hands of the Governor.

Short and Long Terms.

In the event of a fatal termination of the illness, Governor Mann would appoint first for the unexpired term, which ends on March 4 of next year. The next term would begin at once, and an appointment for this would also be probable, for even if there is no extra session there will be two months of work in Congress in December, 1911, and January, 1912, before the next Legislature could act. Besides, a member of Congress, far more than a member of the Legislature, can be of no service in vacation time.

In an auditorium well fitted for the purpose, the First Virginia Regiment celebrated St. Patrick's night in the greatest indoor meet ever held by the companies representing the Richmond battalion. In Hands of Speaker.

Representative Underwood, of Alabama, who, with Representative Champ Clark, had been in charge of the fight conducted by the Democratic forces throughout the day, said at 10:30:

"They are coming from New 1007s. he haldedphia and more distant points, he said. "Some will arrive by midnight, others not until to-morrow, with these additional votes we hope to stem the tide."

With these additional votes we hope to stem the tide."

"The Speaker will not rule on this question—at least, not for a while," Mr. Dwight added with a significant smile.

No Warsing Given.

Without a note of warning that so radical a proposition would be brought up with the apparent support of a majority of the membership of the House, late in the afternoon obtained the floor and offered a resolution for a change or destroy the power of the Speaker, but there had been little or no thought of any possibility that the hattle for ascendancy would so soon be fought.

Mr. Norris insisted that the language of the Constitution gave his measure the same privilege that Speaker Cannon had claimed for a resolution relating to the taking of the census, lite and home the floor asked that this resolution be placed before the House at once.

On both the Republican and Democratic sides nearly every member was in his place, and all realized that at last the "Insurgents" were locking horns with the regular Republicans for what might prove a death struggle. On both sides of the House to callow the country to see where they stood in their attitude a complete the same privilege that Speaker Cannon had claimed for a resolution relating to the taking of the census, little for ascendancy would so soon be fought.

The huge chair, looking like a tilrone, in which the guest of the evening sat, is the property of M. J. Faherty, president of the club. Originally it was surmounted by a beautiful carved crown, but this design had been displaced to-night by an American eagle.

"Couldn't expect an American President to sit under an emblem which has always been a sign of oppression to irrishmen," explained Mr. Faherty, sitting at the right hand of the guest of honor.

kan had the resolution handy against the possibility of a time coming that would make it useful. He seized the opportunity and fung the gage of open battle into the arena. The previous disastrous results made the Cannon forces wary and they immediately began "sparting for time".

It was evident on every side that the forgunization was againing for its very existence. The conflict was on a plane different from any that had been held in the past. It appeared that the positions had been reversed. The enemy had presented a solid front and there were wide breaches in the Restulars' ranks.

An Endurance Contest.

The Regulars declared that the Norris resolution was not in order, but they had not the votes to enforce their position. At the same time dehate on this point could not be limited, and the fight resolved itself into an endurance contest, with the Regulars behind the breastworks and the insurgents and Democrat; the besiesting force.
